Missing Child Case First Profiled on NetPosse.com is now on America's Most Wanted Missing Horse Could be Key to Finding Missing Girl

Shelby, North Carolina – The missing child case of Mary Nunes from New Hampshire was first brought to international attention after being profiled on Stolen Horse International's Web site, www.NetPosse.com, Nov. 10, 2006. Now, America's Most Wanted has joined forces with the U.S. Marshals Service in an effort to locate this missing child abducted by her mother Genevieve Kelley, a prominent New Hampshire physician, and her stepfather, Scott Kelley – both federal fugitives wanted by U.S. Marshals Service.

Authorities and Stolen Horse International (SHI) are requesting the help of the equine community in solving this case. The horse that could be the link is believed to be a bay Appendix Quarter Horse gelding possibly named Nicky. SHI's involvement in this case began in July 2006, after Debi Metcalfe, president, received a phone call from a Deputy U.S. Marshal. Since that time, Debi and Angela Kirby, NetPosse's volunteer executive coordinator, have developed a close working relationship with investigators in a joint effort to leave no stone unturned as the search for Mary and her abductors continues.

The equine community knows Debi Metcalfe as the horse world's equivalent to John Walsh, and Stolen Horse International is the organization that locates stolen and missing horses, tack and trailers, just as America's Most Wanted helps law enforcement search for missing children and hunt down fugitives.

With the combined forces of the U.S. Marshals Service, the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, America's Most Wanted and Stolen Horse International, it is only a matter of time before these fugitives will be identified and located with your help so that Mary can be reunited with her father. For a complete profile, including photos, of Mary Nunes and the fugitives click the link on the top of SHI's homepage: <http://www.netposse.com>.

Given Genevieve's ability to speak fluent Spanish, authorities believe the fugitives may have fled to a Spanish-speaking country outside the U.S. or to one of its territories. However, she may have assumed a new identity and be stateside. Keep in mind, though, these fugitives could be anywhere. It is also possible that Mary Elizabeth Nunes does not realize that she has been abducted. Anyone with information on the fugitives, missing child or horse(s) Genevieve may have owned is urged to contact the U.S. Marshals Service at 1-800-336-0102; NCMEC at 1-800-THE-LOST (1-800-843-5678); or America's Most Wanted at 1-800-CRIME-TV (1-800-274-6388).

SHI was formed because of Debi's personal experience after her family's horse, Idaho, was stolen in 1997 and recovered fifty-one weeks later, through their personal efforts. Over the last ten years, Debi has become the renowned authority on horse theft as she has worked with victims, law enforcement agencies and the court systems to recover horses, and spoken at myriad events in an effort to educate the public.
